WHILE ONTARIO'S YOUNG MEN DIE

The almost unbelievable has happened.

The die has been cast.

Ontario's present Premier, Mr. Harry Nixon, has announced a general election for Wednesday, August 4th.

With Canadian boys poised for the invasion ready to meet the enemy in bitter battle; with our airmen nightly flying into the face of the foe; with our navy in daily struggle to win the Battle of the Atlantic,, says The Globe and Mail, Mr. Nixon calls an election to fly a kite for his master at Ottawa, Mr. King.

There is no other excuse for an election. The people do not want one. A majority of the Nixon members of the Ontario Legislature voted for an extension for another year. The day of decision on the battlefield draws nigh. Yet here we have Mr. Nixon playing the game of the machine politicians at Ottawa. What a travesty!

What an offense against the mothers and fathers of the young men who are on the eve of offering their life's blood to defeat the Axis! And, while they fight, politicians at home play the same old political tricks, seeking to keep themselves deep in the patronage trought. Does the sacrifice of Canadians mean nothing? Is stump-speaking the only thing that matters at this time of peril to all free men:

While Ontario citizens are scraping up their last dollar to pay to win the war, Mr. Nixon calls an election that will cost Ontario electors $1,200,000. It will take 34,000 election officers when there is a terrific manpower shortage. It will take gasoline for the politicians to run all over the Province. It will take tires. It will mean hove expenditures by parties contesting the elections. And why? Just because the Ottawa strategists think this is a good time to test public opinion in Ontario.

And what of the fighting men overseas? Virtually, disfranchised as they are by Mr. Nixon's proxy rian, they will have no say in the Ontario election. They cannot even mention on the proxy the name of the party or the candidate they want to run their afficirs in Ontario. They are not even being told who the candidates are. And while those men are ready to sacrifice their very lives for democracy they are denied the secret; and free ballot, a right of every civilian of age in Ontario.

Ontario has had a proud part to play in Dominion affairs. Since Confederation this Province has contributed mightily to the growth and influence of the Dominion. Under the War Measures Act, Ontario has been: shorn of its powers. But they will be in active use after the war. During the reconstruction period Ontario will age ... have its full part.

To have a puppet Government in Ontario is unthinkable. Yet inat is what Mr. Nixon's is. The Cabinet Ministers at Ottawa are doing everything in their power to consolidate themselves by electing Mr. Nixon. Eight of those Ministers left their war work at Ottawa to assure Mr. Nixon the convention in Toronto as party leader. Now they want a snap election in Ontario to solidify their hold on this Province. We have opposed the calling of an election at this time. We do so again. Without equivocation we condemn this party manneuwre by Mr. Nixon and his Cabinet. We condemn this attempt at election manipulation.

The people of Ontario, whose heart and soul are in the winning of the war, must ac- moors and its heather-Ireland's shamrock cept this challenge of Premier Nixon's.

The beneficiaries of the Ottawa-Nixon patronage Eystem will vote.

The pressure groups will vote.

mark high on their list the rate, Wednesday, future of Canada. August 4.

For on that day they can register their indignation against party trickery.

On that day they can cast their vote against those who play the Tammany Hall game while the nation's best offer their lives.

A TRIBUTE TO THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Ralph W. Carney, an industralist of Wichita, Kansas, gave an address before the Empire Club of Canada in Toronto last month, concluding with this stirring tribute to the British Empire:

Have you ever thought of what it really is-this British Empire that you talk about, hear about over the radio, read about in history, and that, in personification, you ask God to save, in your famous song?

Well, let me, an American, respectfully salute you, bid you good-bye, and thank you for your attention here today, by telling you what I think it is . . .

The British Empire is the "Sleeping Appeasing Giant" among nations, suddenly transformed by bombs on Warsaw into Smashing Colossus and a terrible instrument of righteous vengeance; the joy-rider turned Pilot of the R.C.A.F. and the R.A.F.; the jazz orchestra become the fife and drum corps.

It is Piccadilly Circus and the Savoy, suddenly warmed by the Spirit of Waterloo and the defeat of the Spanish Armada; it is the night club, the hunting-lodge and the country club discarding its play clothes for uniform and jumpers, and the sign of the Red Cross upon its sleeve.

It is waltz music and the rhumba, shifting to the blare of bugles; it is all the trivial ditties of Tin Pan Alley welling into "Oh Canada" and "God Save The King."

It is the soda clerk dying for democracy, the fat man on the golf links flinging away his clubs to become an air warden; the youth on a tennis court suddenly flashing through the air to bomb the Bismarck.

It's the cry of "Gimme, Gimme' changing to "Take all I have if you need it" and the slogans, "Every man for himself" and "What do I get out of it" become again, "England expects every man to do his duty."

It's the Mayfair playboy turned chute trooper; a grimy coal-town laborer leading a suicide squadron to retake Singa pore; the village ne'er-do-well on a mine sweeper in a raging sea; the tap dancer stripped to the waist is a blazing gun turret; the ex-gangster finding his soul in the emulation of Air Marshals Bishop and Cleming and Flying Officer Beurling.

is a cocktail lounge transformed into a bar acks; a youth idling on a Newfoundland beach suddenly giving his life in defense of a lonely colonial outpost; it is laughter in western chuck-wagon, turning into a hoarse shout of "Let 'em have it" from Churchill tank.

It's the c. h car fading into an armored car- the dew e sleeper into an ammunition train and the porter into Gunga Din; the Timid Soul 'aving down his life for a pal.

The street corner idler winning a citation for valor; the "boy who wasn't much use" stading to the guns of a flaming, sinking cruiser, taking one last defiant shot before a cold and pitness ocean closes over to strangle out his life.

It is the Three-hours-for-lunch fellow carrying a sandwich and the labor unions keeping their promise that there shall be no more strikes.

It is Clive of India, Kitchener of Khartoum, Wellington of Waterloo; Sir Douglas Haig, Wavell and Montgomery; Lord Nelson, Henry Morgan and Admirals Jeliicoe and Beatty; Gladstone, Disraeli and Edmund Burke; Henry VIII and Cremwell and William the Conqueror; the Archbishop of Canter-bury, and the Duke of Windsor; William Shakespeare, Robert Burns, Charles Dickens, and Browning and Sir Walter Scott; Queen Victoria and Lady Astor; Gracie Fields and Sir Harry Lauder and Noel Coward; Robert Bruce and Sean O'Malley; and Lloyd George; the Welsh miner in the coal-blackened bowels of the earth and his thunderous chorus, the sky-scraper scrub-woman and the colonel's

It's Westminster Abbey, Scotland's and her songs-Limehouse, the Lions of Trafalgar Square - Big Ben and the Tower of London - Nova Scotia's fishing banks, the mines of Kimberley, Australia's sheep and her fighting heart-New Zealand's lonesome brawary - the Canadian Rockies - Lake Louise and Banff-Montreal and Quebec and Then let all the good citizens of Ontario Ottawa and Toronto-and the great sublime

> It is Cirtin of Australia, Mackenzie King andsweet Queen Elizabeth-God truly save nem - and the unknown Soldier - the UnionJack and the Maple Leaf and the awful majestyof that deathless name-The British Empire!

What a proud people you should be! And it is every man, woman and child who buys a Victory Bond and stamp, supports the Red Cross, gives his blood for plasma, glowing in sacrifice that becomes pain as our wounded bear their pain so that, truly, "There will always be an England!"

It's self-interest become self-sacrificethe spirit of indifference become the Spirit of General Montgomery — the homestead turned kirk or cathedral because of the prayers of mothers there; the dingy town become a flaming symbol because it has given birth to heroes; and the human heart and soul become torch and beacon to light the way to Liberty and Freedom for all of the oppressed peoples of the world.

That, is the British Empire!

That, too, is Canada, and it is for that, that we work, and pray, and fight! And unto whom we surrender up our sons!

Penned and Pilfered

Some men refuse to worry over the wartime scarcity of washing machines. They are the lucky chaps who married one.

If a person is in a crowd of people all of whom are talking, he may have to shout pretty loud to make himself heard. In the excitement of modern life, a concern has to talk fairly loud through advertising, to get attention or make itself heard.

When public entertainers are applauded by their audiences, they are stimulated and encouraged to do even better. It has the same effect when the home town folks praise the work done by the leaders of community mer ements and organizations.

Who does not remember the early days of motoring or the early motoring days with their joys. trials, tribulations, expectations, glorifications and anticipations? What a pride there was in that early model, that which would travel at the "terrific" peed of probably fifteen miles an hour, hit every stone, bumped into every rut, bumped out again. and then biff-a tire was blown out. Possibly the story might be told by this pen but in reading the Christian Monitor it is so well told that in face of it po attempt will be made. Instead we shall let Miss Phyllis Fenner present the tale.

With no further explanation, apology or introduction we republish the lady's so very apt and fitting story holus bolus. It runs:

"Have you a quart of nice, ripe strawberries? We'll stop by and get them in a little while." It was my mother telephoning to Whitwoods, about 9 o'clock on a Sunday morning. The Fenners were going for a Sunday drive. They would have strawberges-large, luscious strewberges-to eat "out of hant" as they rode along.

Times had changed. No more Wa father back out the best burgy, polish it within an inch of its life, clean the ha-ness, curry the horse, and draw up in front of the muse with prancing Jen or Prince rarin' to go.

No. Insteed father backed the two-cylinder, chain-drive Buice out of the tiry garage (the garage was made large and larger as time went on to accommodate the change in size of car). There he left it standing to be loaded for our trie. Logdad? I'll say! Notonly was our lunch packed in wit a length of rope a case we neded to be lowed a lantern in tase purlights didn't work, a can of gasoline for extra fiel. For, you e, there were no service garages, higus stations, a Laything to do with automobiles, evn in what we thought were very modern times. When we drove in those days we were entirely onour own for whatever happened. In fact, we of n it as if we were in enemy territory, what with irai farmers and people who didn't like

In we piled, five of us, mother in her automobile bonnelwith the flowing voil, a duster, gloves. Out. came fauer in his leather autocap with its leather flaps tit up over the top, looking a little Sherlock Holman, his long duster hitting his heels, long gaunst gloves of leather halfway to his elbows. goges up over his cap-goggles haed with soft fur or it to keep our every bit of dust. We were ready to art

Adjusting the spark 'ever under the wheel, fatha er took the crank from the floor of the car under his seat, inserting it in the side, and whirled the motor. Once, twice, three times. Suddenly, with a terrific roar and a small earthquake shaking the car. the motor started. Quick! quick! Father sprang up, lowered the spark lever until the motor ran more smoothly, climbed in, reclased his brake, and . oh, hang! The motor coughed and stopped.

Once more he tried. The motor would not start. Perhaps a dirty spark plug. Up went the hood, out came the plug. A rag wiped it off, a scrutiny of the plug (as if he had known about cars all his life), and father put it back again. Again the cranking And, finally, the inevitable shaking and roaring, the adjusting of the spark lever, and we were really ready to back out of the yard and start off for our Father pushed the foot gear, shifting into low, then into high, and off we went, chug, chug, chug, down the dusty village street, over "thank-youma'ams" at the village crosswalks, with much laughter from us children as we bounced into the air and down again. And father always inquired without once turning his eyes from his job of driving, "Everybody present?" And we all were.

The car looked like a huge bare thing, as 1 think back on it, but it probably didn't look as queer to me then, for all cars were that way. No top, no windshield on your car. The horn, which stuck up on the driver's side (the right side in those days), had a large rubber bulb to make it honk.

The fastest we could go was 20 to 25 miles an hour. And going slow was almost as great a feat as going fast. Great was our excitement when later we had a car that would actually move along behind a cow on a narrow road.

As we drove along, it began to get hotter and hotter, not just because the sun was hot and it was a summer's day, but because right under the driver's seal was the engine. If anything needed fixing, which it often did, we all had to climb out while father took up the floor-board of the car to survey the situation.

Through the villages we drove, bumping along rouga, dusty, rutty roads, and suddenly, whoops, there was another thank-you-ma'am in the middle of the street. Up we shot, and down again, amidst laughter from us all. People came to their front doors. People stopped to look after us. For we were more of an novelty than an airplane today. E sides, what a noise we did make as we went through

Father had long since discarded the goggles which were hot and prevented his seeing clearly. The gloves and custer he retained, for they were nocessary. Ahead of us was a farmer on his wagon. The road was narrow, the farmer was stubbern. He didn't hold with these new-fangled notions, automobiles He wouldn't budge an inch, and there we were, or men shiny new car in the dust of the farmer's wagor forced us to go along as slowly as we could taking his dust . . . and his "sass." The farmer turned off, and our speed increased.

- Hill! My. how steep it looked to go dow-"Gosh, girls, brace your feet," shouted little brother. Holding our breath, down we went. All safe, only my new hat blew off in the dirt. A mudhole at the bottom. We suspected the farmers of digging those mudholes to catch us so they could earn a couple of dollars hauling the car out of the mud on a Sunday afternoon. But we made it all right, recrieved my hat, and went on.

The day wore on. We came to the-Hill. This time we had to go up. The engine pulled and pulled and got hot about it, and then hesitated. Jam went the brakes, "Pile out," yelled father, Out we climbed, all except father, and on up the hill went the car. not stopping the engine lest it would never go again, with us trudging in the dust behind. At the top, father waited for us. The engine was cooling off. In we cumbed and went on our way.

But hold on. Why did we bump along so hard? The road suddenly seemed full of lumps. Could it be we had a flat tire? We stopped. Out climbed father, Yes, a flat tire. No garages to call. Out in the country with no houses in sight. And yet, in 15 minutes after we sat down beside the dusty road while father fixed the tire, a crowd had gathered. from where we knew not. A crowd to watch and Fixing the tire was some job. One end of the car we "aised by a jack. Then father pried the tire off the . heal with a flat, steel gadget, poking between . " tire and the wheel until he at last got it under. Then he worked another in, and another. Fig. Jly taking his hands he gave a mighty pull and me off. The inner tube was pulled out. 1 can the father turning and turning it to see where the leck was. Perhaps it was a big hole, perhaps only a pin prink that he could locate only by putting it in water to find the bubble of air. Out came a box of patches. A patch was stuck over the hole, and the tube put back in the tire. If the tire casing was damaged, a "shoe" was tied over it. But the worst was yet to come. The tire had to be pumped by hand. No "free air." No engine pump. Muscle did it. And then on our way rejoicing.

Many adventures we had. Horses we met became frightened, and we drow up alongside the road while the driver drove his prancing steed past. . . . . . . . . . . . .

Driving along on the way home, night caught up with us. Father stopped, got out and lighted the kerosene light in the rear. Then, turning on something on the running board of the car, he went to the front lights and lighted them with a match. A funny smell reached us, the calcium carbide from the lights. The lights filekered. Sometimes they refused to work. Sometimes as we drove along suddenly the lights grew dim and great shadows seemed to cover the road. And then, of a sudden, they would flare up bright again. Night driving was not fun, but then, we almost never met another car.

The leather seats of the car became damp with dew. Sometimes we stopped to add water or gasoline to the two tanks in the tront. Eventually we dreve into our own yard, tired and happy.

God Calls A Leader

Exodus 3:1-12. . . .

Golden Text-Exodus 3:10.

An Introduction To The Lesson The bondage of the Israelites in Egypt was prolonged during the reigns of several Pharoahs. He the Egyptian, died and was suclead the people of Israel out of Egypt. Nearly all great men, whether in the secular or spiritual scene, have owed much to their mothers. The mother of Moses was had instilled into the heart of Moras a love for his brethren and given him to feel that it was his responsibility to help them in their difficult position.

The Heart of The Lesson

It is a great moment in the life of any man when he comes face to face with God, and is conscious of a commission from Him to undertake some particular line of service. To Moses, this call became the turning point of his life, had he refused to accept the trust committed to him, his life would have ended in failure. By responding to it, though after some hesitation, he became one of the outstanding personalities on the pages of scripture and of secular history. His name will be remembered with honor so long as the world lasts, and in eternity his reward is certain (Hebrews 11:23-26).

Application

When God calls anyone to undertake any mission, He gives the needed grace and power, Augustine ell said "God's commandments God's enablings." The Lord ver asks anyone to undertake any work in his own strength. It is He who plans the work and who supplies all that is required to complete 't. Have we learned to be submissive to His will and dependent upon His strength?

When Are We At Our Best?

What do we mean by being "at our best"? I found a series of for Great Britain. Their arrival overseas has now a woman of remarkable faith and questions that will help us to answer the question.

When we are dominating others? When we are trying to give another a good time? When we have responsibilities to carry through? When we are being depended upon and trusted? When we are afraid of being criticized?

When we can be quite and hear others talk? When we are monopolizing conversation? When we are helping others?

Blushing Bicyclists

Riding a bicycle in a breeze with one hand while attempting to hold down a very brief skirt with the other is pretty hard on a girl. So one judges from the blushes that diffuse her countenance and the embarrassed glances at passers-by.

As an onlooker we have no objection to fluttering skirts, within reason, but we feel it is both dangerous and uncomfortable to steer a bicycle by one handle bar.

You might think it difficult to worship with the assertive splendours of such an ornithological window. On the contrary, it was helpful, and on that Sunday morning, with the dappled light within and the murmur of trees and birds without, one longed to sing the Benedicite, "O all ye works of the Lord, bless ye the Lord."

Here's A Pretty Kettle ...!

In Brown's Hardware store the other day we learned something

Did you ever notice that the new tea-kettles, when there are any, have only a stubby lip for pouring? Well, Mr. Brown informs us the reason for this is that all the long bent spouts, once a part of every self-rest, ecting teakettle, were formerly imported from Germany, and there won't be any m - until the war is over. That is why you have to almost turn your nex teakettle on its head before it will pour.

Now we know what the economists mean when they say we will have need of Germany after the war and must reinstate her as a trading nation. But what we can't get over is this: What is there about a long, bent teakettle spout that our manufacturers can't master?

It took a war-the one before this-to convince us that we could make our own Christmas cards, good ones, too. Before that, nearly all bore the words, "Printed in Bavaria." Did it need another war to teach us how to make teakettle spouts?

Under the heading "Land of the Seven Seas", by Lincoln Barnett, there recently appeared in Reader's Digest, the following lengthy story of this product of the Grimsby district

Of all the nation's agencies of war production, only one, the Maritime Commission, drew commendation in the bleak report published by the Truman committee five weeks after Pearl Harbor.

At the Commission's next board meeting its chairman, Rear Admiral Emory Scott Land, stared coldly at his fellow commissioners, who radiated a glow of self-satisfaction. He warned: "My father was one of seven children. Every time any of those kids got any parental praise, the others ganged of the British Empire; he was also up and gave him a few good kicks awarded the U.S. Navy Cross for in the aft sheets." Within a few his service in submarine construcweeks "Jerry" Land's parable came true. For U.S. reverses in the Far-East were being blamed on "an acute shortage of ships."

It has now become evident that this is a war of salt-war transportation. In fact it might almost be called Jerry Land's war. Being chairman of the Maritime Commis-War Shipping Administrator and U.S . Te resentative on the Combined Supping Adjustment Board, his importance is outranked by few members of the United Nations High Command.

As War Shipping Administrator, Land exercises supreme dominion over all U.S. merchant ship moveministration headque = 1 = dicates over which tain's Ministry of War Transport. The injured feelings that Land's acidulous tongue has distributed up Washington, D.C., and down the continental seaboards May 17, 1943, are by-products of his extraordinarily precipitate honesty. His Your letter of May 10th gave me great powers and complete detachsteer an independent course, fol-President. Independence is Land's premier characteristic.

Land's preoccupation with shipbuilding dates from his first years out of Annapolis, Graduated sixth in his class, he was assigned to take post-graduate courses in naval architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he won his master's degree. During the last war he became the navy's authority on German boats. In the interim between the surrender of Austria-Hungary and the armistice, Land was permitted by the Italians to inspect Austrian shipyards at Pola where the latesttype German submarines had been under construction. Windering through a draffing room he spotted tracings of German blueprints. With the dexterity of a kleptomaniac he swept them from the drawing boards and walked off, saying nothing to his Italian hosts. Later he composed the most penetrating study of German U-Boat construction the navy had ever received.

When the Germans final', sur rendered, it was Land's task to make sure German U-bogts had been disarmed. Nosing around with characteristic thoroughness, found schools of subs which Germans had never reported, hidden in estuaries of the River Weser. For this discovery he was created a Commander of the Order

During postwar years, Land's interest in the anatomy of ships did not slacken and in the closing months of Hoover's administration he won appointment as Acting Chief Constructor of the Navy and Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair. Although the New Deal Congress refused to confirm Hoover's appointee, on March 15, 1933, President Roosevelt renominated Land, convinced that he was the navy's No. 1 expert on

In January the President called for 8,000,000 tons of shipping in 1942 and 10,-000,000 in 1943. The following month he upped 1943's quota to 15,000,000.

As a man of well-weathered constitution, Land has stood up amazingly well under what many consider the single biggest job of the war. At 63 his eyes are sea-blue and bright, his skin subjound. His lung power is notable. Maritime Commission employes collect his best verbal explosions, the way employees of an import house collect foreign stamps. One of his bestknown lines erroted out of his exasperation at Americans who refused to depart from warring Europe in 1939. He had dispatched ships to rescue them and they had spurned his effort. 'Hell, then,' snarled the admiral, "let 'em paint American flags on their stern sheets and swim home!"

Widely quoted was Land's sudden chagrin when he felt he had inadvertently revealed some stricted information to reporters Srowling angrily at his interviewers, he megaphoned: "Sometimes I remind myself of Confucius. You know what Confucius' mother said to him? She said, 'Confucius, you talk too god-dam much."

The informality of Land's behavior is notable. He shuns the executives' dining room in the Department of Commerce Building for the employes' Cafeteria. Here he pushes his tray down the long counter and descends without warning on some flustered table of minor employes. One morning before a White House reception some unexpected work called him to New York. He instructed his chauffeur to meet him at Union Station that evening with his dress clothes. As the train neared Washington, Land walked forward to in the engineer's cab. Jumping down before the wheels had stopped turning, Land sprinted through the station, climbed into his car, squirmed into his white tie and tails as he sped down Pennsylvania Avenue, and made the White House, fastidiously clothed, just as guests were filing in to dinner.

> She was right. Land has heard himself belabored by Congressmen, government officials and plain citizens from coast to coast. But there are others in high government posts who can't forget that Land gave his country three good years' head start in creating out of nothing a great and expanding merchant marine. "When the public begins to yell for Jerry Land's throat," one Washington observer declared recently, "and they willit'll be just about the dirtiest trick

Land himself is philosophical about his critics for he feels that he has done his best. All along the continental ramparts of North America, monostrous cranes now are lacing together the steel fabrics of his ships which are sliding down the ways at a rate never before envisaged by seafaring men.

The months to come will be tough ones for the admiral. But he does not flinch from them. Nor does he flinch any more from his swivel chair. When a friend asked how he enjoyed his work these grim weeks, Land cocked an eyebrow and grunted contentedly: "Hell, I've got a mean s. o. b. of

The 19th bank loans, Canada's Chartered Banks help Canadians to benefit themselves, their fellows and their country. Many of these loans are smallbut all contribute their share to the day-by-day activities of Canadian enterprise.

Some further facts about Canada's Banks:

Chartered Banks' loans related to agriculture as shown on the last official return to Parliament, totalled $340,118,473. This sum included loans to farmers, ranchers, fruit raisers and to grain dealers and grain exporters.

Every general manager today heading a Chartered Bank entered the bank as a junior in some small branch.

Up to and including February, 1943, no fewer than 6803 men and 154 women bank employees had enlisted in the armed forces.

Canadians in every walk of life and in every part of Canada are served by more than three thousand branches and sub-agencies maintained by the Chartered Sanks to facilitate the nation's business.
